

The Effectiveness of Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) in Cancer Care

Cancer is a major global health burden, and patients often seek complementary and alternative therapies, including Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM), to alleviate symptoms and improve quality of life. TCM encompasses various modalities, such as acupuncture, herbal medicine, and therapeutic exercises, which have been used for centuries in China and other Asian countries. In recent years, there has been a growing interest in evaluating the efficacy and safety of TCM interventions in cancer care. This analysis aims to review the available evidence from published studies on the potential benefits of TCM for various cancer-related conditions.
